

Letter of recommendation for Rafael André

Dear Reader,

I have had the pleasure of working with Rafael as his engineering team lead for the past 6 months.

I strongly recommend him. He's been a core member of our team with a lot of responsibility. He's taken on whatever we've thrown his way with enthusiasm, care, and ability.

We are a fast-moving tech startup with many deep technical problems to solve, and we've thrown him in at the deep end. An example of this is that when Rafael joined we gave him the mammoth task of sorting our reporting system out. A complex system that generates custom reports for customers, and Rafael was given full ownership of this system. He has excelled at this task and is our report wizard who knows anything and everything about it. This project was very backend heavy with lots of tangled requirements, business logic, and in a complex area of the codebase, so I'd have no problem recommending him for any other situation you can throw his way.

Beyond the reporting system, Rafael has taken on a broader role in our team. He owns a core section of our system, which means we can route customer requirements directly to him with full confidence they'll be handled quickly and to a high standard. We've also been going through a significant transition recently, moving to an AI-first agentic approach and completely overhauling our app and infrastructure. He embraces new ideas, jumps at challenging work, and has shown himself to be a strong developer, architect, and colleague throughout.

Personally he's been excellent to work with. He communicates clearly, collaborates well, and I'd put extra focus on his enthusiasm - it's great to have someone jumping for problems.

I'm confident Rafael would be a great asset to your team.

If you'd like more information please do not hesitate to contact me at tom.roberts@worldover.io, I'd be happy to elaborate or answer any questions.

Best,

Tom Roberts

Senior Developer at Worldover